

MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

“What Does Re-Opening Look Like When You Never Closed”

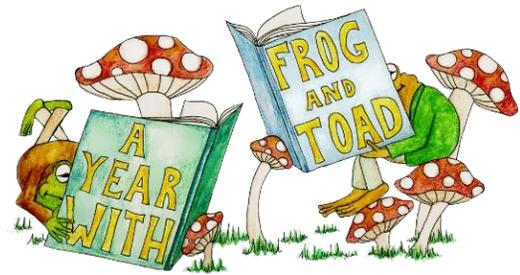

By Erin Evarts

During the pandemic, Lyric never closed. We postponed, and we re-evaluated – but we kept moving forward. At this point, we still don’t know exactly when we will be able to perform in the Flynn again, or be able to gather, sing, and dance like “we used to.” Our protocols for COVID-friendly rehearsals, guidelines for keeping our building safe, and our success with streaming and outdoor performances have been the blueprint for many others in our area. We can – and should – be proud of this work, and the well-deserved reputation for producing safe and successful theatre during the last year. As the state of Vermont works toward vaccine distribution and a complete re-opening of the arts and entertainment sector, Lyric will continue to be a leader.

Being nimble and using the creativity and ingenuity of our membership has served us well. With zero cases of transmission, Lyric is demonstrating daily that theater can continue safely under the right circumstances. If CDC or Vermont guidelines change, we may very well change with them, but we also may decide to be more cautious than what is technically allowed at any given moment. In short, the moment that we can “re-open,” doesn’t necessarily mean we will. We will continue to take every measure to ensure that our volunteers and audiences are safe – which is the hallmark of all our decision-making since last March. The office and the Board will continue to work together to make decisions strategically for Lyric’s future.

We are all looking forward to returning to normalcy, and I promise we will get there soon. We appreciate your continued support and understanding. For now, what can you do to help get us back to the theater as soon as possible remains the same. Wear your mask, stay home to reduce transmission whenever possible, and get your vaccine when it is your turn.

I can’t wait to see you at the theater again!

LYRIC MEMBER HELPS OUR FURRY FRIENDS

In lieu of taking a normal vacation this year, I'm doing a thru-hike of the entire Vermont Long Trail, start to finish, as a fundraiser for Homeward Bound, our local Humane Society. This was coordinated with them and done with their help and support. The full story and more info can be found at the official pledge page link; all money goes straight to Homeward Bound and is tax-deductible.
